

---Call for Papers---

EASA-Teaching and Learning Anthropology Network Webinar.
Teaching and Learning Anthropology during the Pandemic.
Dilemmas, Challenges and Opportunities.

The recent pandemic has faced us with new challenges, dilemmas, and opportunities in teaching and learning anthropology. This global challenge has been met locally in various ways, but mostly by turning to online solutions.

The EASA Teaching Anthropology Network wishes to take stock of the current situation, promote a space for sharing, and reflect how this situation affects the teaching and learning of anthropology in different contexts and levels.

For this, we are organizing an experimental space, in the form of a Webinar, for collective discussion of how the current pandemic has affected the teaching and learning of anthropology. It will consist of a session for small-group (3 or 4 participants) presentation of cases and discussion, followed by a plenary.

We invite prospective participants to send a summary (150 words) of a case, event or issue encountered while teaching anthropology in academic and non-academic contexts during the pandemic to be discussed in the webinar. Contributors are kindly requested to indicate which category (dilemmas, challenges, opportunities) the presentation belongs to.

We hope the webinar will lead to a collective publication.

Deadline for submission of summaries: Feb. 13th
(please send to canas.bottos@ntnu.no and imanos@uom.edu.gr)

Webinar Date: March 17th

Time: 12hs-1430 CET.

Place: ZOOM platform

Participants will be notified by February 22nd, 2021. Details about the event will follow in due time.